Orange hunters and lumbermen may organize a community drive on a panther which is said to have been seen in that town at various times in the past two weeks. Old hunters ascribe an unusual movement among deer, especially does, to the ravages of the panther, and the same "varmint" is believed to be responsible for the appearance of a badly frightened doe on the streets of Barre this week. Recently the carcass of a doe that had been partially devoured by some animal was discovered in the Burnt Mountain district. A game warden was called, and in his opinion the doe was attacked by the panther. Two men who followed the back track of the doe's assailant convinced themselves that it was a dog when the trail showed where the animal had jumped from fifteen to twenty-five feet. Several times the trail of the panther has appeared in the vicinity of Burnt and Signal mountains. Orange hunters say the panther tracks are the first they have seen in a long time, although in years past no mountain town in Vermont could get along without an annual panther scare.

The March issue of the Spaulding Sentinel appeared before the students and subscribers of the paper yesterday afternoon. The number contains an unusually large number of articles contributed by the students, among them being a story entitled, "My First Impressions of Spaulding High School," by Charles Duncan, '21; a report on "The March of the Highlanders," by Helen Cruickshank, '18; a poem, "A Disciple of Hoover," by F. H. L., '18; "Impression of San Antonio," by E. J. Dole, a former member of the high school faculty, who is at present in the aviation branch of service at San Antonio, Tex.; "An Imaginary Senior Trip by M. M., '18, and a fable, "The Fox, the Skunk and the Mule," by V. Carusi, '19. This number of the Sentinel was in charge of an editorial staff chosen recently from the student body. The cover design was altered slightly from that of the preceding copies. The new design was made by Henry Vanetti, '17, and illustrates a soldier and a sailor on guard, while underneath the illustration the words, "The Spaulding Sentinel," appears. The copy contains the usual number of local notes, athletic events and pages devoted to alumni notes, while the editorials give a great deal of consideration to the various relief funds started by the students of the high school.

The woman who buys a coat or suit without a keen eye for quality this spring will be quickly enlightened. Her coat will soon lose its first good looks. If the thaw that is coming before May day holds off until Monday, to-morrow will be the 110th day of sleighing this winter, according to the record kept by a Barre man. The sleighing has been continuous, and if winter lingers as late as usual in the lap of the Vermont spring, wheels will not be used for a fortnight and possibly longer.

The highly bred Holstein bull calf weh A. T. and A. L. Smith, the Holstein breeders, donated to the Red Cross carnival, went to its new home in Plainfield this morning. The purchasers are Charles D. Perry and son, and in taking away with them a valuable acquisition to their herd, they expressed themselves as well pleased with the purchase. The Red Cross is indebted to Messrs. Smith for a gift that added materially to the net proceeds of the Goose Green carnival, for the Holstein brought a top price.

A good sized crowd attended the auction sale at Farnham's yesterday. There seem to be a good many customers for second-hand horses but the supply is limited. Only about 18 horses were brought in for this sale, one pair of second horses, with some about them brought $200, another pair well along in years brought $165, single horses sold from $35 to $100, a number of express and other sleighs, express harnesses, work and single harnesses were sold at auction, a number of fresh horses were sold and exchanged during the day. It seems that horses are going to be high this spring. C. F. Smith, auctioneer.

Dealers in sugar tools hereabouts report a greater run on the articles than for years and all indications point to sugar going on a large scale, although some, on account of high prices for help and the lack of it at any price, are still undecided whether to tap or not. Yesterday afternoon four big sled loads of sugar rigs reached the city, coming from Craftsbury, where they are manufactured by Percy Koir. These were to fill orders already taken and consisted of four or five complete sets of sugaring tools and a variety of other sugaring articles. Because of lack of material, with which to make the tools, some dealers have been obliged to refrain from taking further orders, although the demand still holds good.
